胡德禮の報告中極秘にわたる部分次のとおり。

1. 中米関係。米國からは三、四回にわたる明年訪米の様に自ら言ってきた。自らは西米間で詳しく了解が生まれるか行けようと思われ、これは難しいと思ふ。北東欧諸國に米訪問の約束がある。これは両方とも明年行へば生まれない。何故か三回米下會に力を注ぐ時間が無くなってしまつた。よつて双方ともに明年は訪問せず、明後年^{また考へる}に思つていふ。これは米が米國に言つていふ60%以下とは話か合ふ友人のついでに三、限りの話をしていふ。

2. 蘇聯方針。(1) 南北双方の関係を緩和するに希望。経済の促進を通じて和睦の關係に好まぬか。そのほゆるやかな運手別に緩む

Secret

Indefinite Period

The Secret parts of General Secretary Hu's statements are as follows.

1. Relations between China and the United States: The United States has invited me three or four times to visit the United States next year. I think that I would be able to go if there were a new understanding between the two countries but I think that it would be difficult. Furthermore, I have promised to visit countries in Eastern Europe. I cannot do both next year. The reason why is that I am pouring my energy into the 13th National Congress of the Communist Party of China (CPC) and will not have the time for it. I am thus thinking to make neither visit next year but to consider each again the year after next. I have not yet told the United States but am telling you alone this, Excellency, as a friend with whom it is easy to talk.

2. Korean Peninsula:

(1) We hope for the North and South to ease relations with one another. It would be good for them to achieve peaceful relations through the promotion of dialogue. Thereafter, it would probably be good to transition to a loose confederal system. We conveyed this to the North, the South, and the United States, but the United States has given no response. The North was very angry. The situation has ended in stalemate. The North's sense of independence is extremely strong.

China knows well that the South hopes for improved relations with China. However, under the present circumstances we can take no new step. If we did, the North would become angry and China would cease to have a say in regard to the North and the other socialist countries. But we are certain that in the future there will come a day for improved relations with both the North and the South.

(2) (Prime Minister Nakasone said that the Republic of Korea hopes for an expansion in relations with China. He received word that the Republic of Korea, other than strongly hoping for China's participation in the Olympics, thinks that such measures as direct trade and the mutual establishment of LT offices would be desirable. If that happened, he would be ready to undertake similar measure between Japan and the North. I am telling you this in strict secrecy. Hu thereupon said:) We know that the South has such hopes for an improvement in relations, which is good. However, it has to be in a form acceptable to the North and the other socialist countries.

It is fine if you convey what I have just said to the North and feel out their response.

3. China's domestic affairs: The foremost issue for next year's 13th CPC Congress will be the succession of new cadres to posts held by old ones. (Chinese Foreign Ministry participants in the meeting were emphatic that this point in particular be treated as secret.)

4. Japan-China air routes: When the Prime Minister remarked that air routes over the North and the South would save over 40 minutes on flights between Japan and China and that he would thus like to realize something in that regard, Hu answered that there was nothing to be done about it, as the North would not accept it.
