September 23, 1944 Prisoners of War in the Balkans

Citation:

"Prisoners of War in the Balkans", September 23, 1944, Wilson Center Digital Archive, Container 174, W. Averell Harriman Papers, Manuscript Division, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. https://wilson-center-digital-archive.dvincitest.com/document/220019

Summary:

Harriman and Stalin discuss the Red Army's help evacuating American prisoners of war from Romania and their treatment by the Bulgarians.

Original Language:

English

Contents:

Original Scan
Transcript - English

THE AMBASSADOR

all tream when the best Conversation.

September 23, 1944

2 4 30 b

The American Ambassador, Mr. Harriman Present: Mr. Edward Page, Second Secretary of Embassy

> The British Ambassador, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr Major A. H. Birse, Second Secretary of Embassy

Marshal I. V. Stalin Mr. V. M. Molotov, People's Commissar for Poreign Affairs Mr. Pavlov, Soviet interpreter

Subjecti Prisoners of War in the Balkans.

At the conclusion of our conversation with Marshal Stalin I thanked him for the cooperation which the Red Army had extended in regard to the evacuation of our prisoners of war from Rumania. I remarked that the Bulgarians had seriously abused our prisoners. Because of this we would expect full investigation and apprehension of those who had been responsible. Marshal Stalin readily concurred. He said that the Bulgarians were brutal people and that many of them had come under the influence of the Masis. On the other hand the Rumanians, who were a "more simple people", had behaved much better.

Comme to General Deane

Reproduced from the Collections of the Manuscript Division, Library of Congress

THE AMBASSADOR TOP SECRET

Copy to General Deane

Conversation. DDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDDD
Present: The American Ambassador, Mr. Harriman
☐ The British Ambassador, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr ☐ Major A. H. Birse, Second Secretary of Embassy
<ul><li>☐ Marshal I. V. Stalin</li><li>☐ Mr. V. M. Molotov, People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs</li><li>☐ Mr. Pavlov, Soviet interpreter</li></ul>
Subject: Prisoners of War in the Balkans.
□At the conclusion of our conversation with Marshal Stalin I thanked him for the cooperation which the Red Army had extended in regard to the evacuation of our prisoners of war from Rumania. I remarked that the Bulgarians had seriously abused our prisoners. Because of this we would expect full investigation and apprehensions of those who had been responsible. Marshal Stalin readily concurred. He said that the Bulgarians were brutal people and that many of them had come under the influence of the Nazis. On the other hand the Rumanians, who were a "more simple people", had behaved much better.
EP:nn